DILLON - Dillon town officials are optimistic that a massive overhaul of a centrally located building may add a spark of life back into Dillon's quiet downtown core.

Denver based dcb Construction Company, Inc. plans to add 40 townhomes on a new upper level of the Dillon Centre, which houses the bowling alley, a pool hall, a property management company and several other businesses.

Along with the residential addition, the Centre will also receive a two-level parking garage and a new, stucco exterior shell.

"This building will have a completely different look to it," said building co-owner Abbas Rajabi.

The plans, which have been approved by the town for two and half years, call for 16 one-bedroom units and 24 two-bedroom units to be built on top of the existing building.

The town looks at the project as a step in the right direction toward reviving Dillon's main drag, which has suffered in recent years, said Matt Thompson, planner for the town of Dillon.
